

Jeff Amaral St. Martin School

Athleticism comes naturally to eighth-grader Jeff Amaral, who excels at both baseball and basketball at St. Martin School.

Amaral has played baseball for St. Martin School, as well as several Sunnyvale National All-Star teams and various traveling teams, including the San Jose Stallions, San Jose Bulldawgs, and the Silicon Valley Hornets. He currently plays with the Saratoga Athletics, for whom he bats fourth in the lineup and is a first-string pitcher and catcher.

Amaral's interests extend past the baseball diamond. He maintains a 4.0 GPA and pursues broader interests, such as playing the lead in school plays. He has also been an officer on the student council. He also helps younger children as a tutor in the computer lab and an umpire in the local Little League.

His goal is to attend St. Francis High School and then play college baseball while studying law at Arizona State University.
