

St. Martin School of Sunnyvale: quality Catholic education delivered in a community of caring Nestled in a quiet corner of bustling Silicon Valley, St. Martin School of Sunnyvale provides a tranquil oasis where students can discover and develop their talents while enjoying the close and caring community that defines the school.

"Today's families face more challenges than ever before," says St. Martin School Principal Genie Florczyk. "Many parents have to work long hours or travel extensively just to make ends meet. Most don't have extended family nearby. We believe children need a strong sense of community in order to keep making positive daily choices. At St. Martin, our values typically mirror those of the families who enroll here, so students not only have the benefit of our community as extended family, they are getting consistent messages at home and school."

In addition to traditional studies, students benefit from regular music classes, hands-on science and state-of-the-art technology. Families enjoy regular group social events and work together for the benefit of the children and the broader community.

One of 31 Catholic schools in the Diocese of San Jose, St. Martin School has been providing quality education for up to 300 children of Sunnyvale residents and employees each year since its founding in 1953. The school operates according to the premise that all children can become knowledgeable, creative, responsible and contributing members of the local and world communities.
